D., Philip Gates and Neala Bornman for their excellent suggestions and corrections.

All

כֹּל

Strong's # 3605 kol

And God said, Behold, I have given you every herb yielding seed, which is upon the face of all the earth, and every tree, in which is the fruit of a tree yielding seed; to you it shall be for food: (Genesis 1:29)

This word means “all” and is a very common Biblical Hebrew word appearing over 4,000 times in the Hebrew Bible. The verbal root to this word is kul ^(Strong's #3557) and means to sustain in the sense of providing all that is needed for sustenance. For this reason, the word kol is related to the verb akal ^(Strong's #398) meaning to eat in the sense of sustenance.

Amen

אָמֵן

Strong's # 543

amen

And Benaiah the son of Jehoiada answered the king, and said, Amen: YHWH, the God of my lord the king, say so too. (1 Kings 1:36)

Worldwide this is the most famous of all Hebrew words. But, do we know what it means? This word comes from the root aman ^(Strong's #539), pronounced ah-mahn, and means to be firmly planted in place as in Isaiah 22:23 which speaks of a “nail fastened to a secure place.” The noun form, amen, pronounced ah-mehn, is used in the Biblical text by persons who are affirming a statement. In other words, they are saying “I am firmly agreeing with what has been said.” The next time we say amen, let's think about what we are agreeing to.

Ark

תִּבְיָה

Strong's # 8392

teyvah

Make thee an ark of gopher wood; rooms shalt thou make in the ark, and shalt pitch it within and without with pitch. (Genesis 6:14)

In Biblical Hebrew an ark is any floating vessel. Two types of “arks” are found in the Bible, the ark of Noah, a large wooden ship; and the ark of Moses, a floating basket used for holding fish alive, but used for the infant Moses when he was sent out on the Nile river.

Beard

זָקַן

Strong's # 2206

zaqan

“that there came men from Shechem, from Shiloh, and from Samaria, even fourscore men, having their beards shaven and their clothes rent, and having cut themselves, with meal-offerings and frankincense in their hand, to bring them to the house of YHWH.” (Jeremiah 41:5)

In ancient Hebrew culture a long and white beard was a sign of age, maturity and wisdom. The verb form of this word, zaqeyn ^(Strong's #2204), is the Hebrew meaning “to be old.”

Bee

דְּבוֹרָה

Strong's #

1682 devorah

They compassed me about like bees; They are quenched as the fire of thorns: In the name of YHWH I will cut them off. (Psalm 118:12)

The root of devorah is davar (Strong's #1696). This root literally means “to arrange in order,” usually in the sense of arranging words in an order to make a sentence or to “speak.” A colony of bees is insects living in a completely ordered society, hence its connection to the idea of order.

Behold

הִנֵּה

Strong's #
2009*hiyneyh*

“And the angel of YHWH appeared unto him in a flame of fire out of the midst of a bush: and he looked, and, behold, the bush burned with fire, and the bush was not consumed.”
(Exodus 3:2)

“Behold” is a common word found in the Bible (1275 times in the KJV) but not really used in our English language today. Being an abstract word, it does not really convey the Hebraicness of the word hiyneyh. Every Hebrew word gives a picture of an action and this word is no different. The original Hebraic meaning of hiyneyh is best described as one pointing out something important. We would say “Wow, look at that!”

Being

נֶפֶשׁ

Strong's # 5315

nephesh

And all the souls that came out of the loins of Jacob were seventy souls: and Joseph was in Egypt already. (Exodus 1:5)

A person is a unity of different parts: the mind, thought, emotion, personality, body, blood, organs, etc. This word is often translated as “soul,” implying an abstract entity contained within a person. However, the more Hebraic meaning of this word is “the whole of the person” and can be understood as a “being,” “person” or “entity.” This word can be used for man (as seen in Genesis 2:7) and animals (as seen in Genesis 1:21 where it usually translated as “creature”). The root of this word, naphash (Strong's #5314) means “to refresh” in the sense of restoring the whole of the person to its wholeness through rest and nutrition.

Bird

צִפּוֹר

Strong's #
6833*tsipor*

Of all clean birds ye may eat.
(Deuteronomy 14:11)

This Hebrew word is a generic term for all birds. This word is also the name of Tsipor (Romanized as Zippor, Numbers 22:2) and Moses' wife Tsiporah (Romanized as Zipporah, the "ah" is the feminine suffix, Exodus 2:21). The study of "Edenics" looks for connections between Hebrew and other languages. One example of this is the similarity between the Hebrew word tsipor (bird) and the word sparrow (a species of bird).

Bless

בָּרַךְ

Strong's # 1288

barak

And he made the camels to kneel down without the city by the well of water at the time of evening, the time that women go out to draw water. (Genesis 24:11)

The Hebrew verb barak literally means “to kneel.” However, when this verb is written in the piel form it means “to show respect” (usually translated as “bless”). A related Hebrew word is berakhah (Strong's #1293), meaning “a gift” or “present.” From this we can see the concrete meaning behind the piel form of the verb barak. It is to present a gift to another while kneeling out of respect. The extended meaning of this word is “to do or give something of value to another.” Elohiym “respects” us by providing for our needs and we in turn “respect” Elohiym by giving him of ourselves as his servants.

Box

אָרוֹן

Strong's # 727 aron

“And they shall make an ark of acacia wood: two cubits and a half shall be the length thereof, and a cubit and a half the breadth thereof, and a cubit and a half the height thereof.”
(Exodus 25:10)

There are three “boxes” mentioned in the Hebrew Bible. The box of the covenant, usually translated as the ark of the covenant, contained the objects of the covenant: the manna, Aaron’s staff and the tablets. Another box mentioned in the Hebrew Bible is the box of Yoseph (Genesis 50:26) or, as most translations translate it, a coffin. The third is identified as a chest in 2 Kings 12:10.

Branch

מַטֵּה

Strong's # 4294 mateh

And YHWH said unto him, What is that in thy hand? And he said, A rod. (Exodus 4:2)

This word is used for the branch of a tree, but is also used for a staff that is a branch cut from a tree; and also for a tribe, as a branch of a family lineage.

Bread

לֶחֶם

Strong's # 3899

lechem

“in the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread, till thou return unto the ground; for out of it wast thou taken: for dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return.” (Genesis 3:19)

The dough is placed on the table and kneaded by hitting it with the fists, rolling it back and forth, picking it up and turning it over, and... Kind of sounds like a fight, doesn't it? Actually, the Hebrew noun lechem means “bread” and comes from the verbal root lacham ^(Strong's #3898), and means “to fight.” The place called Bethlehem is actually two Hebrew words: beyt ^(Strong's #1004) meaning “house” and lechem meaning “bread.” Together they mean “house of bread.” In Genesis 3:19 we read, In the sweat of your face you shall eat bread. Could this be because we have to fight (till and weed) the ground to bring up the crop, fight (thresh and winnow) the grain to remove the husk from the seeds, fight (grind) the seeds to turn them into flour and fight (knead) the dough to make the bread?

Brier

שָׁמִיר

Strong's # 8068

and I will lay it waste; it shall not be pruned nor hoed; but there shall come up briers and thorns: I will also command the clouds that they rain no rain upon it. (Isaiah 5:6)

Frequently this word is used in the book of Isaiah in the phrase shamiyr v'shayit (briers and thorns). This word comes from the root shamar ^(Strong's #8104) often translated as “keep,” but more literally meaning “to guard” or “preserve.” When a shepherd was out at night with the flock he would construct a corral of briers (shamiyr) to “preserve” the flock from predators.

Brother

אח

Strong's #
251 ahh

And again she bare his brother Abel. And Abel was a keeper of sheep, but Cain was a tiller of the ground. (Genesis 4:2)

The original pictographic script of Hebrew used a picture for each letter. This word would have had the picture of an ox head (aleph) representing “strength” and a wall (hhet) representing “protection.” This Hebrew word (ahh) has two meanings. The first is a “hearth,” which was a circle of rocks that enclosed the fire to protect and contain it. The second is “the brother.” The brothers of the family, like the rocks of the hearth, surrounded the family inside camp to protect it from enemies. Both the rocks of the hearth and the brothers of the family are the “strong protectors.”

Camel

גַּמֶּל

Strong's # 1581

gamal

“behold, the hand of YHWH is upon thy cattle which are in the field, upon the horses, upon the asses, upon the camels, upon the herds, and upon the flocks: there shall be a very grievous murrain.” (Exodus 9:3)

The English word camel is from the Greek word kamelos which in turn is from the Hebrew word gamal. The camel was a common animal in the herds of the nomads of both the ancient and modern times. A nomad's wealth was measured by the size of his herds of livestock including camels (see Genesis 30:43). Camels were a choice beast of burden because of their ability to carry large loads and being able to travel long distances without water.

City

עִיר

Strong's #
5892*iyr*

And YHWH came down to see the city and the tower, which the children of men builded. (Genesis 11:5)

Do cities sometime appear as “dark” places? The Ancient Hebrews seemed to think so. The Hebrew parent root ar can mean a “city” or an “enemy.” Take a look at these other Hebrew words, all with the ar root within them. Ariyph is a cloud; sa’ar is a storm; arav is to grow dark; ur is blind; ya’ar is a forest; iyr is a city; sho’ar is offensive or vile and arphel (origins of awful?) is a thick darkness.

Correctness

צִדְקָה

Strong's #

6664 tsedeq

YHWH ministereth judgment to the peoples: Judge me, O YHWH, according to my righteousness, and to mine integrity that is in me. (Psalm 7:8)

While this word is usually translated as “righteousness,” the more concrete Hebraic meaning is “correctness,” in the sense of walking in the “correct” path.

Counsel

עֵצָה

Strong's # 6098

eytsah

*With God is wisdom and might;
He hath counsel and understanding. (Job 12:13)*

The word eytsah, meaning counsel, is the feminine form of the masculine word eyts ^(Strong's #6086) meaning “a tree.” Counsel is the giving of advice, encouragement or guidance. Within the family or the community this would be from an elder, one filled with years of wisdom and experience. In the Hebrew mind this elder or counselor and his counsel are seen as support to the community in the same way that the trunk of a tree supports the branches of the tree.

Crimson

תולעת

Strong's # 8438

and blue, and purple, and scarlet, and fine linen, and goats' hair, (Exodus 25:4)

This word can represent the color crimson or the worm “coccus ilicis,” which when dried, was ground into a powder and used as a dye for the color crimson. This worm also contains a chemical that is an anti-bacterial agent and was included in the formula for the ashes of the red heifer (Leviticus 14:4) used when someone came into contact with a dead body (a host for bacteria).

Darkness

עֲרָפֶל

Strong's # 6205 araphel

*And the people stood afar off, and Moses drew near unto the thick darkness where God was.
(Exodus 20:21)*

There are two words in the Hebrew translated as darkness. The most common is the word hshshk (Strong's #2822) and means "darkness." The other word is araphel and means something more than just darkness. In Exodus 20:21, we read and Moses approached the araphel where God was. This darkness is a different darkness and may be alluded to in Exodus 10:21 which is the plague of darkness (hshshk) that could be felt. We often associate darkness with evil and light with good; but, interestingly, most times God appears in this araphel, such as we saw in Exodus 20:21 but also in 2 Samuel 22:10, 1 Kings 8:12, Job 22:13, Psalm 97:2 and other places.

Daytime

יוֹמָם

Strong's # 3119 yomam

They meet with darkness in the day-time. And grope at noonday as in the night. (Job 5:14)

This word is derived from the word yom (Strong's #3117) meaning “day” which can refer to a twenty-four hour period or daytime. The word yomam always refers to the daylight hours, the time between sunup and sundown.

Decrease

חָסַר

Strong's # 2637

and the waters returned from off the earth continually: and after the end of a hundred and fifty days the waters decreased. (Genesis 8:3)

This verb means to decrease in size, amount, authority, dignity or reputation. The first use of this word is for the decreasing of the waters from the flood in Genesis 8:3, 5.

Desire

חֲפֵצִים

Strong's # 2656 hhephets

But his delight is in the law of YHWH; And on his law doth he meditate day and night. (Psalm 1:2)

This noun can refer to the desire for an object such as gold or silver or an action that one seeks, such as salvation from a deliverer.

Do

עָשָׂה

Strong's # 6213 asah

“And God made the firmament, and divided the waters which were under the firmament from the waters which were above the firmament: and it was so.”
(Genesis 1:7)

This very common verb simply means “to do” an action and is used in a wide variety of applications. It is frequently used in the context of “making” something.

Dog

כָּלֵב

Strong's # 3611

kelev

And the Philistine said unto David, Am I a dog, that thou comest to me with staves? And the Philistine cursed David by his gods. (1 Samuel 17:43)

The Hebrew word kelev meaning “dog” is only mentioned 31 times in the Hebrew Bible, but never refers to an actual dog. Some references to dogs are as analogies such as in Psalm 59:6: They return at evening, they howl like a dog, And go round about the city. Many references to dogs portray them in a negative light: His watchmen are blind, they are all without knowledge; they are all dumb dogs, they cannot bark; dreaming, lying down, loving to slumber. Yea, they are greedy dogs which can never have enough (Isaiah 56:10,11). However, there is another interpretation of this word, which could mean “like a heart,” by interpreting the letter kaph as the prefix meaning “like,” and the noun lev, meaning “heart.”

Dry ground

יַבֻּשָׁה

Strong's # 3004 yabashah

And God said, Let the waters under the heavens be gathered together unto one place, and let the dry land appear: and it was so. (Genesis 1:9)

To understand the original Hebraic concrete meaning of English abstract words used in translations of the Bible, it helps to look at the roots of the Hebrew word and other words derived from the same root. For instance, the word “shame” is an abstract word but is related to a “dried up ground.” When a lake or pond dries up, all of the organic matter begins to decay and stink, which is the Hebrew word ba’ash ^(Strong’s #887), derived from the same root as yabashah. The word bushah ^(Strong’s #955), also derived from the same root, is translated as “shame,” but is Hebraically understood as something someone does that really “stinks.”

Dwell

שָׁכַן

Strong's #

7931 shakhan

God enlarge Japheth, And let him dwell in the tents of Shem; And let Canaan be his servant.
(Genesis 9:27)

The verb shakhan means “to dwell,” to stay or sit in one location for an indeterminate duration. Several nouns are derived from this verbal root including shekhen (Strong's #7933) meaning a dwelling, shakhen (Strong's #7934) meaning a dweller, and mishkhan (Strong's #4908) meaning a dwelling place and used frequently in the Hebrew Bible for the “tabernacle,” the place God dwells. Another word familiar to many, but not actually a Biblical Hebrew word, is shekhinah, the presence of God dwelling within the Temple.

Dwelling

מוֹשָׁב

Strong's # 4186 moshav

they saw not one another, neither rose any one from his place for three days: but all the children of Israel had light in their dwellings. (Exodus 10:23)

The noun moshav comes from the root yashav (Strong's #3427) meaning “to settle.” A common formation of a noun from a root is to add the letter “M” to the front of the root. This “M” usually adds the meaning “place” to the root, so moshav means “settling place” or “dwelling.”

Ear

אָזן

Strong's # 241 ozen

“And they gave unto Jacob all the foreign gods which were in their hand, and the rings which were in their ears; and Jacob hid them under the oak which was by Shechem.” (Genesis 35:4)

Ozen is the Hebrew word for the “ear” (see Exodus 21:6). A Hebrew’s speech is often strange to us, so the translators “fix” the text so that it can be more “modern.” However, in some cases the original Hebrew is much more interesting. For instance, in Numbers 11:1, the KJV says “And when the people complained it displeased the LORD.” The Hebrew literally reads, “And the people were murmuring and it was bad in the ear of YHWH.” The verb related to this is azan ^(Strong’s #238) meaning “to give an ear” or “to hear.” Interestingly, the Hebrew word for a balance is mozen ^(Strong’s #3976), derived from ozen. Why would a balance be related to the Hebrew word for an “ear?” Could the ancients have understood that a person’s inner “ear” included a mechanism for determining balance?

Eysh'dat

תִּשְׁבַּח

Strong's #
799 eysh'dat

And he said, YHWH came from Sinai, And rose from Seir unto them; He shined forth from mount Paran, And he came from the ten thousands of holy ones: At his right hand was a fiery law for them. (Deuteronomy 33:2)

One of the most mysterious words in the Hebrew is the word eysh'dat, which only occurs once in the Bible: Deuteronomy 33:2, which states From [YHWH's] right hand eysh'dat to them. It has been interpreted by most that this is a combination of two words: eysh ^(Strong's #784) meaning "fire" and dat ^(Strong's #1881) meaning "edict," but because the word dat is only used in later Hebrew and eysh'dat is written as one word, this interpretation seems unlikely and the original meaning of this word is completely unknown.

Fade

נָבַל

Strong's # 5034 naveyl

“And he shall be like a tree planted by the streams of water, That bringeth forth its fruit in its season, Whose leaf also doth not wither; And whatsoever he doeth shall prosper.” (Psalm 1:3)

This verb means “the fading away” or degradation of a person, action or object. This can be the withering away of a leaf, the wearing out of strength or a non-productive effort.

Fear

יָרֵא

Strong's # 3372

yarey

And he said, I heard thy voice in the garden, and I was afraid, because I was naked; and I hid myself. (Genesis 3:10)

The concrete Hebraic meaning of this verb is “to flow.” It is related to the word yorehh (Strong's #3138) meaning “first rain” and ye'or (Strong's #2975) meaning “stream.” When you are seriously afraid of something, you can feel your insides “flowing.” This is the meaning of this word that is usually translated simply as “fear.”

Feed

רָעָה

Strong's # 7462 ra'ah

“The wolf and the lamb shall feed together, and the lion shall eat straw like the ox; and dust shall be the serpent’s food. They shall not hurt nor destroy in all my holy mountain, saith YHWH.” (Isaiah 65:25)

The Hebrew verb ra'ah means “to feed” and is usually used for the feeding of a flock or herd. The participle form of a verb is formed by adding an “o” after the first letter and an “e” after the second letter. The participle form of the verb ra'ah is ro'eh and means “one who feeds,” a shepherd or herder.

Fire

עַשׂ

Strong's # 784 eysh

Then YHWH rained upon Sodom and upon Gomorrah brimstone and fire from YHWH out of heaven; (Genesis 19:24)

As the Hebrews were a nomadic people, their lifestyle was much the same as when we go camping, and what camp is not complete without a fire. Not only is it used for camping, but a place where family and friends get together to tell stories, play music and just relax after a long day.

Fish

דָּג

Strong's # 1709

dag

“And the fear of you and the dread of you shall be upon every beast of the earth, and upon every bird of the heavens; With all wherewith the ground teemeth, and all the fishes of the sea, into your hand are they delivered.” (Genesis 9:2)

In the original pictographic script used to write Hebrew, and other Semitic languages, this word was written with the picture of a door, the letter dalet, representing a “back and forth movement” and the picture of a “foot,” the letter gimel. When these two letters are combined we have “the back and forth movement of the foot/tail,” a perfect image for a “fish.” Interestingly, the “a” in the Hebrew word dag is pronounced with a short “a” and would therefore be pronounced like our word “dog,” another animal with a “tail that moves back and forth.” Because of the abundance of fish caught in nets, this word is the origin of another Hebrew word: dagah (Strong’s #1711) meaning “abundance.”

Flesh

בָּשָׂר

Strong's # 1320

within yet three days shall Pharaoh lift up thy head from off thee, and shall hang thee on a tree; and the birds shall eat thy flesh from off thee. (Genesis 40:19)

The word basar literally means “meat” such as in Exodus 12:8, but can also mean the whole of a person or animal such as in Genesis 6:13. A closely related word, besorah ^(Strong's #1309), the feminine form of basar, means “good news” or “gospel.” In the Ancient Hebrew culture, a fatted animal is slaughtered for a feast at times of “good news;” hence, the connection between basar and besorah.

Flint

פִּדְכֹד

Strong's #
3539

kad'kod

And I will make thy pinnacles of rubies, and thy gates of carbuncles, and all thy border of precious stones. (Isaiah 54:12)

A flint is a dark colored rock that, when struck with iron, creates sparks. This type of tool has been used since the beginning of man to create fire. A related word, kiydod (Strong's #3590) is the Hebrew word for “sparks.”

Flute

חָלִיל

Strong's # 2485 hhaliyl

And all the people came up after him, and the people piped with pipes, and rejoiced with great joy, so that the earth rent with the sound of them. (1 Kings 1:40)

The Hebrew word hhaliyl is an ancient type of flute and comes from the root hhalal (Strong's #2490) meaning “to pierce” through, the idea of a “pipe” with holes pierced through it.

Fly

עוּף

Strong's #
5774*ooph*

And God said, Let the waters swarm with swarms of living creatures, and let birds fly above the earth in the open firmament of heaven. (Genesis 1:20)

This verb means “to fly,” while the noun form, pronounced oph ^(Strong's #5775) but spelled the same, is a “flyer” and can be a bird, bat or insect, anything that flies. Hebrew commonly uses word puns, words of similar sounds together. Genesis 1:20 is a good example where it says ve'oph ye'oph which means “flyers flying.”

yatsar

And YHWH God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life; and man became a living soul. (Genesis 2:7)

This Hebrew verb means to press and form into shape, as a potter does with clay. The participle form of this verb means “potter,” as in Isaiah 64:8: “But now, O YHWH, thou art our father; we are the clay, and thou our potter.”

Fruit

פְּרִי

Strong's #
6529*p'riy*

“And God said, Let the earth put forth grass, herbs yielding seed, and fruit-trees bearing fruit after their kind, wherein is the seed thereof, upon the earth: and it was so.” (Genesis 1:11)

The ancient parent root P.R. is the origin of the Hebrew word for “fruit,” but also for so many of our “fruit” words; PeaR, aPRicot, PRune and PeRsimmon. When reversed we have gRaPe. It is also common for one letter to be exchanged for a similar sounding letter as words are passed from one language to another. One common exchange is the exchange between the R and the L, which adds to the list of “fruit” words coming from the P.R. root: apPLe and PLum. Another exchange is the P and B - BeRry and RhuBarb (reversed). The exchange of the P and F brings us back to the word FRuit.

Give

נָתַן

Strong's # 5414 natan

And Abraham ran unto the herd, and fetched a calf tender and good, and gave it unto the servant; and he hastened to dress it. (Genesis 18:7)

This verb is what I call a “generic” verb. While it means to give, it is used in a wide variety of applications. It can mean to set in place, to grant permission, to pay, to speak (give words), to bring forth, to yield and much more.

Glory

כְּבוֹד

Strong's # 3519

kavod

“and in the morning, then ye shall see the glory of YHWH; for that he heareth your murmurings against YHWH: and what are we, that ye murmur against us?”
(Exodus 16:7)

The word “glory” is an abstract word. If we look at how this word is paralleled with other words in poetical passages of the Bible, we can discover the original concrete meaning of this word. In Psalm 3:3 the kavod of Elohiym (God) is paralleled with his “shield,” and in Job 29:20, Job’s kavod is paralleled with his “bow.” In Psalm 24:8 we read “who is this king of the kavod, YHWH is strong and mighty, YHWH is mighty in battle.” The original concrete meaning of kavod is “battle armaments.” The meaning “armament” fits with the literal meaning of the root of kavod, which is “heavy.” Armaments are the heavy weapons and defenses of battle. In the Exodus 16:7, Israel will “see” the “armament” of YHWH, the one who has done battle for them with the Egyptians.

Good

טוֹב

Strong's #
2896*tov*

And God saw the light, that it was good: and God divided the light from the darkness. (Genesis 1:4)

What is good? From our modern western perspective this would be something that is pleasing to us, but from an Hebraic perspective the Hebrew word tov, usually translated as good, means something that is “functional.” A complex set of gears in a watch that functions together properly is tov. However, if the gears are not functioning properly, then they are ra ^(Strong's #7451), usually translated as “evil” or “bad,” but more Hebraicly meaning “dysfunctional.” And God saw everything that he had made, and, behold, it was very good (tov). And there was evening and there was morning, the sixth day. When God saw his creation, it is not that it was “pleasing” to him; rather, he saw that it functioned properly.

Grab Tightly

נָשָׂא

Strong's # 5401 nashaq

And his father Isaac said unto him, Come near now, and kiss me, my son. (Genesis 27:26)

The verb nashaq means “to grab hold tightly” as when grabbing hold of a weapon for battle, as we see in Psalm 78:9. This same verb can also be used for an embrace, such as we see in Genesis 29:11, where Jacob kisses Rachel.

Gracious

חָנַן

Strong's # 2603 hhanan

YHWH make his face to shine upon thee, and be gracious unto thee: (Numbers 6:25)

This verb is often translated as “to be gracious” or “have mercy;” however, these are abstract terms and do not help us understand the meaning of this verb from an Hebraic perspective, which always relates words to something concrete. One of the best tools to use to find the more concrete meaning of a word is to look at how that word is paralleled with other words in poetical passages. In the book of Psalms, the word Hhanan is paralleled with “heal,” “help,” “raise up,” “refuge” and “give strength.” From a concrete Hebraic perspective, Hhanan means all of this and no English word can convey the meaning of the Hebrew, but we could sum up its meaning with “providing protection.” Where would a nomadic Hebrew run for protection? The camp, in the Hebrew language, is the word mahhaneh ^(Strong's # 4264), a noun related to Hhanan.

Grass

נֶשֶׁת

Strong's # 1877 deshe

“And God said, Let the earth put forth grass, herbs yielding seed, and fruit-trees bearing fruit after their kind, wherein is the seed thereof, upon the earth: and it was so.” (Genesis 1:11)

This word can mean “grass,” or other green vegetation, but is also used for the color “green” from the color of grass.

Grave

קָבַר

Strong's # 6913 qever

I am a stranger and a sojourner with you. Give me a possession of a burying-place with you, that I may bury my dead out of my sight. (Genesis 23:4)

The grave was commonly a cave owned by the family where its members were laid after death (see Genesis 49:30,31). This is often referred to in the Bible such as in the following verse: And David slept with his fathers, and was buried in the city of David (1 Kings 2:10). The verb form qavar ^(Strong's #6912) means “to bury,” which is also found in the verse above.

Greece

יָוָן

Strong's # 3120 yavan

The sons of Japheth: Gomer, and Magog, and Madai, and Javan, and Tubal, and Meshech, and Tiras. (Genesis 10:2)

*For I have bent Judah as my bow; I have made Ephraim its arrow. I will brandish your sons, O Zion, over your sons, O Greece, and wield you like a warrior's sword. (Zechariah 9:13 RSV) The Hebrew name for Greece is yavan and is related to the Hebrew word yayin ^(Strong's #3196) meaning wine: The land of wine? Yavan, the founder of the land of yavan, was the son of Japheth, the son of Noah (Genesis 10:2).*

Ground

אָדָמָה

Strong's #
127

adamah

“And no plant of the field was yet in the earth, and no herb of the field had yet sprung up; for YHWH God had not caused it to rain upon the earth: and there was not a man to till the ground;” (Genesis 2:5)

Because of the reddish color of soil, this Hebrew word is derived out of the Hebrew parent root dam ^(Strong's #1818) meaning blood. Another word derived from this root is adom ^(Strong's #122) meaning “red” and is also another name for Esau, the brother of Jacob (Genesis 25:30). Another related word is adam ^(Strong's #120) meaning “man,” from the blood that runs through his veins, but also because adam, the first man, was taken from the adamah and his dam will return to the adamah.

Guide

נָחַח

Strong's # 5148

nahhah

“And it came to pass, when Pharaoh had let the people go, that God led them not by the way of the land of the Philistines, although that was near; for God said, Lest peradventure the people repent when they see war, and they return to Egypt:”
(Exodus 13:17)

This verb is closely related to other roots which mean “rest,” “quiet” and “comfort.” The context of the use of this word in the Bible often implies a guiding or leading of another to a place of rest.

Happy

אֵשֶׁר

Strong's # 835 esher

Blessed is the man that walketh not in the counsel of the wicked, Nor standeth in the way of sinners, Nor sitteth in the seat of scoffers: (Psalm 1:1)

*Blessed is the man who does not walk in the council of the wicked (Psalm 1:1). The word “blessed” is the Hebrew word esher and has the more concrete meaning of “a cord stretched out straight.” One who walks his life “straightly” has a good life or, as we might say, happy. Psalm 1:1 could be better translated as *Happy is the man...

Heel

עֲקֵב

Strong's # 6119 aqeyv

and I will put enmity between thee and the woman, and between thy seed and her seed: he shall bruise thy head, and thou shalt bruise his heel.
(Genesis 3:15)

This noun comes from the verb aqav (Strong's #6117) and means "to grab the heel," meaning "he grabs the heel." From this verb comes the name ya'aqov (Strong's #3290) (Jacob, the second born of Isaac) meaning "he grabs the heel." He was given this name because he came out holding onto the heel of his brother Esau. Another word derived from this verbal root is the word eyqev (Strong's #6118), which is usually translated as "because," but through the idea of one person doing one thing "on the heels" of another person doing something else. This can be seen in the following verse; Because (eyqev) Caleb.... followed me fully... I will bring him into the land (Numbers 14:24).

Herdman

בוקר

Strong's # 951 boqer

Then answered Amos, and said to Amaziah, I was no prophet, neither was I a prophet's son; but I was a herdsman, and a dresser of sycamore-trees: (Amos 7:14)

Have you ever heard the word “buckaroo?” This was a term from the old west meaning “cowboy,” coming from the Spanish word “vaquero.” This Spanish word has a relationship with a Hebrew word with the same meaning. The Hebrew word “boqer” (sometimes pronounced as voqer) means “herdman” or one who works cattle and is derived from the word baqar ^(Strong's #1241) meaning cattle.

Holy

קָדוֹשׁ

Strong's # 6918

and ye shall be unto me a kingdom of priests, and a holy nation. These are the words which thou shalt speak unto the children of Israel. (Exodus 19:6)

Most of us have certain items in our homes that are used only during special occasion, such as a set of fine china dinnerware or a special suit or dress. Something that is set aside for a special purpose is what is meant by the Hebrew word qadosh. The furnishings in the tabernacle were qadosh and would never be used for anything but for use in the tabernacle, any more than one would take fine china on a camping trip. The nation of Israel was also qadosh; they were set aside from the other nations by God to do his work in the world. The word qadosh has been translated as “holy,” but this word has taken on a new meaning of its own: a person who is pious and righteous. This is not the true meaning of this word and demonstrates the need for getting back to the original meaning of Hebrew words.

Honey

דֵּבַשׁ

Strong's # 1706

devash

“He made him ride on the high places of the earth, And he did eat the increase of the field; And he made him to suck honey out of the rock, And oil out of the flinty rock;” (Deuteronomy 32:13)

This word is usually translated as “honey,” but literally means “a thick sticky substance” and may refer to honey or dates, a common fruit in the Near East. The phrase flowing with milk and honey is probably speaking about a land flowing with milk (probably from the prolific goat herds of the region) and devash (honey and/or dates).

Horn

קֶרֶן

Strong's #

7161 qeren

*Save me from the lion's mouth;
Yea, from the horns of the wild-oxen thou hast answered me.
(Psalm 22:21)*

The horns of animals were very versatile objects. They were used as trumpets and even as a weapon in war. They were used to store liquids such as olive oil, foods and medicine. In many ancient cultures kings wore horns as a sign of their power; in fact, the points on modern day crowns are holdover representations of horns and, in addition, our word “crown” comes from the Hebrew word qeren.

Horse

סוס

Strong's # 5483 sus

And the Egyptians pursued, and went in after them into the midst of the sea, all Pharaoh's horses, his chariots, and his horsemen. (Exodus 14:23)

Horses were not a common animal among the nomadic Hebrews, as they were not well suited for the desert. Throughout the Torah (the first five books of the Bible), the only horses mentioned are the horses and chariots of Egypt. In Deuteronomy 17:16 God forbids any future king of Israel from accumulating large numbers of horses by going down to Egypt to acquire them.

House

בַּיִת

Strong's #
1004*bayit*

And there went a man of the house of Levi, and took to wife a daughter of Levi. (Exodus 2:1)

The word bayit can mean the “house” the family resides in or the family itself that resides in one “house.” This word is also the second letter of the Hebrew aleph-beyt. The word “alphabet” comes from the first two Greek letters, alpha and beta, which actually come from the first two Hebrew letters aleph and beyt (bayit), so in Hebrew it is called the aleph-beyt rather than the alphabet.

Idol

אֱלִיל

Strong's # 457 eliyl

Turn ye not unto idols, nor make to yourselves molten gods: I am YHWH your God. (Leviticus 19:4)

In Leviticus 19:4 we read, Do not turn to idols (eliyl) or make for yourselves molten gods (Leviticus 19:4). An idol is a statue of an image of a god that is believed to have supernatural powers. Such were used by many Semitic peoples living around the Hebrews and by the Hebrews themselves, at times. Interestingly, this word is also used in the following verse, As for you, you whitewash with lies; worthless (eliyl) physicians are you all (Job 13:4). An eliyl is anything that is considered to have value, but in reality, has no value at all.

Item

כֶּלִי

Strong's # 3627 keliy

If a man shall deliver unto his neighbor money or stuff to keep, and it be stolen out of the man's house; if the thief be found, he shall pay double. (Exodus 22:7)

Have you ever counted how many “things” you have in your house? Probably not, but it would easily be in the thousands. We are a culture of pack rats and have items for all kinds of functions (everything from utensils to tools to furniture) and many don't even serve a function (such as knick-knacks). The Hebrew word for an item, any item, is keliy. This seems like a pretty broad use of a word, since it could be used for any of the thousands of “things” we have in our homes. But the Ancient Hebrews had very few items and lived very simple lives, so this word would only apply to the few “items” they possessed. The plural form of this word is appropriately translated as “stuff” in Genesis 45:20.

Knife

מֵאֶכֶֿלֶֿת

Strong's# 3979 ma'akhelet

“And Abraham took the wood of the burnt-offering, and laid it upon Isaac his son. And he took in his hand the fire and the knife. And they went both of them together.” (Genesis 22:6)

The Hebrews did not eat with forks or spoons but with knives. The word ma'akhelet comes from the root akhal (Strong's #398) meaning “to eat.” The knife was a very versatile instrument, as it was used in preparing and eating foods, cleaning skins for leather, carving wood or bone and for self-defense. Ancient Knives were made bone, metal, flint or bronze.

Lace

שֵׁרוֹךְ

Strong's #
8288

that I will not take a thread nor a shoe-latchet nor aught that is thine, lest thou shouldest say, I have made Abram rich: (Genesis 14:23)

A serok is a cord or string that is used to attach the sandal to the foot by twisting it around the foot, ankle and lower leg. This word comes from the verbal root sarak (Strong's #8308) meaning “to twist” and is only used twice in the Hebrew Bible, Isaiah 5:27 and in Genesis 14:23, where Abraham refused to owe even a sandal lace to another, a far cry from our credit-driven society of today.

Lamp

נֵר

Strong's #
5216*ner*

And thou shalt make the lamps thereof, seven: and they shall light the lamps thereof, to give light over against it. (Exodus 25:37)

A ner is an object that gives off light. A common style of ancient lamps was made from clay, had a reservoir for oil and a lip or hole on the edge for the wick. The wick absorbed the oil and the gas coming off the wick was lit giving light. The menorah ^(Strong's #4501) of the tabernacle was a ner; in fact, notice that the word NeR is found within the word meNoRah.

Lead

נָהַל

Strong's # 5095 nahal

He maketh me to lie down in green pastures; He leadeth me beside still waters. (Psalm 23:2)

This Hebrew verb is commonly translated as “to lead” or “to rest,” but the more literal meaning of this word is a combination of both of these ideas: “to lead one to a place of rest.”

Leaf

עֲלֵה

Strong's #
5929*aleh*

“And he shall be like a tree planted by the streams of water, That bringeth forth its fruit in its season, Whose leaf also doth not wither; And whatsoever he doeth shall prosper.” (Psalm 1:3)

The verbal root word alah ^(Strong's #5927) (different spelling of the Arabic word allah) means “to go up” or “to be high.” From this root comes the word aleh meaning “high” and is used for the leaves of a tree which are up high in the tree.

Leviathan

לְוִיָּאֵתָן

Strong's # 3882 leev'yatan

Canst thou draw out leviathan with a fishhook? Or press down his tongue with a cord? (Job 41:1)

Most Bible dictionaries identify this “creature” as a crocodile, whale or snake. However, in Job 41 we are given a detailed description of him, his great size and fire and smoke that come from his nose and mouth and the impenetrable armor of his skin. The best word to describe this creature is a “dragon.” It has been speculated by some, and I would agree with them, that this is a large and ferocious dinosaur.

Light

אור

Strong's # 216*or*

And God said, Let there be light: and there was light. (Genesis 1:3)

Probably the most quoted passage in the Bible is “Let there be Light.” In Hebraic thought, light is associated with order (notice the Hebrew word or in the English word order). Genesis 1:3 can be interpreted as “Let there be order” which poetically corresponds with verse 2 that states that the creation was in “chaos.”

Lightning

בָּרָק

Strong's # 1300

baraq

“And it came to pass on the third day, when it was morning, that there were thunders and lightnings, and a thick cloud upon the mount, and the voice of a trumpet exceeding loud; and all the people that were in the camp trembled.” (Exodus 19:16)

This word means “a flash of light” and is used for lightning, but also for the glistening of a metal weapon such as a sword (Deut 32:41) or spear (Nahum 3:3). In Psalm 144:6 lightning, through Hebrew parallelism, is seen as God’s arrows.

Lord

אָדוֹן

Strong's # 113

And Sarah laughed within herself, saying, After I am waxed old shall I have pleasure, my lord being old also? (Genesis 18:12)

The Hebrew word adon is “one who has authority over another” or as it is usually translated, a “lord” and is used in the Bible for both men and God. However, from a Hebraic perspective, a “lord” is not one who simply rules over another, but rather one who provides for and protects those under his charge. At this point, a little Hebrew grammar is in order to help understand what the Hebrew behind the word “Lord” really means.

LORD

יהוה

Strong's #
3068YHWH

These are the generations of the heavens and of the earth when they were created, in the day that YHWH God made earth and heaven. (Genesis 2:4)

Virtually all translations from Judaism and Christianity use “the LORD” for the Hebrew name of God: YHWH. The original pronunciation of the name can never be determined with complete accuracy, but in Hebraic thought, it is the meaning of a name that is more important than its pronunciation. The Hebrew YHWH is the verb hawah meaning “to exist” with the prefix y meaning “he.” Therefore, the word YHWH means “he exists.” YHWH is the one who exists everywhere every time.

Love

אהב

Strong's # 157

and thou shalt love YHWH thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy might. (Deuteronomy 6:5)

We do not choose our parents or siblings, but instead they are given to us as a gift from above, a privileged gift. Even in the ancient Hebrew culture, one's wife was chosen. It is our responsibility to provide and protect that privileged gift. In our modern Western culture love is an abstract thought of emotion, how one feels toward another, but the Hebrew meaning goes much deeper. As a verb, this word means “to provide and protect what is given as a privilege” as well as “to have an intimacy of action and emotion”. We are told to love Elohiym and our neighbors, not in an emotional sense, but in the sense of our actions.

Man

אִישׁ

Strong's #
376*iysh*

And the man said, This is now bone of my bones, and flesh of my flesh: she shall be called Woman, because she was taken out of Man. (Genesis 2:23)

A Hebrew word is closely related to its root as well as to other words derived from that root. So, by looking at the root of the word iysh, we can gain a clearer picture of the meaning of this word. The root of this word is anash (Strong's #605) (the letter n (nun) is frequently dropped from a root) and its meaning can be found in Jeremiah 15:18: Why is my pain unceasing, my wound incurable, refusing to be healed? Anash means “to be incurable” like a wound that refuses to heal. This connection between incurableness and man is probably derived from man’s mortality. I have heard it said before, “We are born terminally ill,” since death is inevitable for all of us.

Meadow

נַאֲחַ

Strong's # 4999 na'ah

He maketh me to lie down in green pastures; He leadeth me beside still waters. (Psalm 23:2)

A place of habitation for many animals, wild and domesticated. This word is related to the idea of beauty in the sense that the meadow or pasture is a delightful place.

Milk

חָלָב

Strong's # 2461

hhalav

And he took butter, and milk, and the calf which he had dressed, and set it before them; and he stood by them under the tree, and they did eat. (Genesis 18:8)

Goats are frequently raised by the nomadic peoples of the modern and ancient Near East. One product from the goats is their milk, a common food staple. This word is also related to the word hhelev ^(Strong's #2459) meaning fat, because of the high fat content in goat's milk. The milk was also turned into cheese, or more correctly curds, by separating out the water in the milk.

Mimic

לִזְזַן

Strong's #
3887*luts*

A trespass-offering mocketh fools; But among the upright there is good will. (Proverbs 14:9)

This verb means “to repeat or imitate another person’s speech as an ambassador, interpreter or mocker.

Mutter

הָגָה

Strong's #
1897*hagah*

And when they shall say unto you, Seek unto them that have familiar spirits and unto the wizards, that chirp and that mutter: should not a people seek unto their God? on behalf of the living should they seek unto the dead? (Isaiah 8:19)

This word is frequently associated with the speaking or muttering of the mouth such as in Psalm 37:30 - The mouth of the righteous mutter wisdom. This is not a speaking to another but to one's self, to meditate.

New Moon

חֲדָשׁ

Strong's # 2320 hhodesh

“And David said unto Jonathan, Behold, to-morrow is the new moon, and I should not fail to sit with the king at meat: but let me go, that I may hide myself in the field unto the third day at even.”
(1 Samuel 20:5)

In Ancient Israel the first crescent of the new moon marked the first day of the month. For this reason, the word hhodesh can mean the “new moon” and it is also the word for “month.” The related words hhadash (Strong's #2319) (masculine) and hhadashah (Strong's #2319) (feminine) mean “new” or “renewed” and the verb hhadash (Strong's #2318) means to “make new” or “renew.”

Night

לַיְלָה

Strong's #
3915 laylah

And God called the light Day, and the darkness he called Night. And there was evening and there was morning, one day. (Genesis 1:5)

Just as the English word “night” means the dark hours of the day, so does the Hebrew word laylah. This word is related to other words meaning “to roll back,” because the sun is rolling back for its return to its rise in the east.

Nose

אף

Strong's # 639 aph

Shall any take him when he is on the watch, Or pierce through his nose with a snare? (Job 40:24)

The Hebrew word aph is an excellent example of how a word can be used in a literal and figurative way. Aph is literally “a nose,” but also is used figuratively as “anger,” for an angry person flares his nostrils. This also demonstrates how an abstract concept (anger) is related to a picture of action, unlike modern languages where abstract words are commonly used with no connection to the concrete.

Not

לֹא

Strong's # 3808

lo

Thou shalt not take the name of YHWH thy God in vain; for YHWH will not hold him guiltless that taketh his name in vain. (Exodus 20:7)

The word lo means “no” or “not” but is most commonly used to negate a verb. For instance, the verb asah (Strong's #6213) is translated as “he did” but lo asah would be translated as “he did not.”

One

אֶחָד

Strong's # 259 ehhad

Therefore shall a man leave his father and his mother, and shall cleave unto his wife: and they shall be one flesh. (Genesis 2:24)

The word ehhad is often used for “one,” but can also be translated with the word “unit,” something that is part of the whole, a unit within a community. In the Hebrew mind everything is, or should be, a part of a unity. There is not one tree, but a tree composed of units within the unity: roots, trunk, branches and leaves. A tree is also in unity with the other trees: the forest. A son is a unit within the brotherhood and the family.

Ox

אֵלֶּף

Strong's #
504 eleph

All sheep and oxen, Yea, and the beasts of the field, (Psalm 8:7)

The ox was the “workhorse” of the Ancient Hebrews. Because of its strength, it was used for pulling heavy loads and plowing fields. Another Hebrew word, eleph (Strong's #505), is spelled and pronounced identically and means a “thousand” in the sense of mightiness from the idea of the strength of the eleph.

Palm Leaf

כַּף

Strong's # 3712 kippah

It shall be accomplished before his time, And his branch shall not be green. (Job 15:32)

Because of the palm leaf's shape like that of a hand's "palm," the Hebrew word kippah comes from the Hebrew word kaph (Strong's #3709) meaning "palm." The word kippah is also the modern Hebrew word for the head covering worn by Jews, often called a yarmulke (the Yiddish word for a kippah), because of its bent shape like a palm.

Pass Through

עָבַר

Strong's # 5674

avar

“For I will go through the land of Egypt in that night, and will smite all the first-born in the land of Egypt, both man and beast; and against all the gods of Egypt I will execute judgments: I am YHWH.” (Exodus 12:12)

The Hebrew verb avar means to “pass through,” such as on a road through a region or to “cross over” a river to reach the other side. The proper name Eber is also this same three letter word with the same meaning: “to pass through” or “one who passes through.” The word eevriym (Strong's #5680) is the plural form meaning “Hebrews” and literally means “ones from Eber” or “ones who pass through.” The first person in the Bible identified as a Hebrew is Abram and in Genesis 12:6 we read that Abram “passed through the land (avar).” The word eevriyt, not used in the Biblical text, is the language of the eevriym.

Pasture

מִרְעָה

Strong's # 4829 mireh

And they went to the entrance of Gedor, even unto the east side of the valley, to seek pasture for their flocks. (1 Chronicles 4:39)

The word mireh is literally a “feeding place” and is derived from the verbal root ra’ah (Strong's #7462) meaning “to feed.” The participle form of this verb is ro’eh, meaning “one who feeds” or “shepherd.”

Path

דֶּרֶךְ

Strong's #
1870

derekh

“So he drove out the man; and he placed at the east of the garden of Eden the Cherubim, and the flame of a sword which turned every way, to keep the way of the tree of life.” (Genesis 3:24)

A path is a well-marked road or trail that may be followed to lead one to a specific location. Throughout the Hebrew Bible, the word “path” is used for man’s journey through life. The path that is followed may be one that has been carved out by other men or by God.

Peace

שְׁלוֹם

Strong's # 7965 shalom

But thou shalt go to thy fathers in peace; thou shalt be buried in a good old age. (Genesis 15:15)

When we hear the word “peace,” as this word is usually translated, we usually associate this to mean an absence of war or strife. However, the Hebrew word shalom has a very different meaning. The verb form of the root word is shalam and is usually used in the context of “making restitution.” When a person has caused another to become deficient in some way, such as a loss of livestock, it is the responsibility of the person who created the deficiency to restore what has been taken, lost or stolen. The verb shalam literally means “to make whole or complete.” The noun shalom has the more literal meaning of “being in a state of wholeness,” or “being without deficiency.” The Biblical phrase shalu shalom yerushalayim (pray for the peace of Jerusalem) is not speaking about an absence of war (though that is part of it), but that Jerusalem, and by extension all of Israel, be complete and whole, and goes far beyond the idea of “peace”.

Pen

טִי

Strong's # 5842 eyt

How do ye say, We are wise, and the law of YHWH is with us? But, behold, the false pen of the scribes hath wrought falsely. (Jeremiah 8:8)

Ancient pens were made from reeds where one end was shaved down to form the writing part of the implement. The pen was dipped in ink for writing on papyrus or skins.

Pharaoh

פַּרְעֹה

Strong's #
6547*paroh*

“And the daughter of Pharaoh came down to bathe at the river; and her maidens walked along by the river-side; and she saw the ark among the flags, and sent her handmaid to fetch it.” (Exodus 2:5)

The Hebrew pronunciation of this word is par-oh, unless the previous Hebrew letter, as a prefix or the final letter of the previous word, is a vowel, then it is phar-oh. It is believed that this is an Egyptian word meaning “great house.” The Egyptian Paroh is also referred to as a king, melek ^(Strong's #4428) in the Hebrew Bible. The pronunciation “pharaoh” actually comes from the ancient Greek translation called the Septuagint (LXX). In 1974 the mummy of Ramses II was deteriorating and needed to be flown from the Cairo Museum to Paris. Did you know that even a mummy needs a passport? Ramses II was issued an Egyptian passport that listed his occupation as “King (deceased).”

Plow-point

אֵת

Strong's # 855

eyt

“And he will judge between the nations, and will decide concerning many peoples; and they shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruning-hooks; nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more. “ (Isaiah 2:4)

The metal plow-point was attached to the plow to cut furrows, as marks, in the soil. The two Hebrew letters in this word are the aleph and the tav, and in the original pictographic script, the aleph was a picture of an ox head, the plow puller, and the tav a cross, representing a mark: The Ox of the mark. This same word, but never translated, is used over 7,000 in the Hebrew Bible, as a grammatical tool to identify the direct object of a verb. For instance, Genesis 1:1 reads “In the beginning God created eyt the heavens and the eyt the earth” where the words “heavens” and “earth” are the direct object of the verb bara ^(Strong's #1254) meaning “created.” Think of this grammatical tool as a plow cutting a furrow to connect the verb with its direct object. This word is also uniquely spelled with the first (aleph) and last (tav) letters of the Hebrew alphabet: the beginning and the end.

Pounce

עִיט

Strong's #
5860*iyt*

“and the people flew upon the spoil, and took sheep, and oxen, and calves, and slew them on the ground; and the people did eat them with the blood.” (1 Samuel 14:32)

The fuller meaning of this word is “a bird of prey” (which is the noun ayit ^(Strong's #5861) and is related to iyt) that “swiftly falls down onto its prey” (the noun aht ^(Strong's #5706) but, written defectively in the Bible as ahd, is also related to iyt), tightly grabbing hold of it with its talons to squeeze the life out of it. Notice this imagery in 1 Samuel 14:32 and the people “pounced” the plunder and took the sheep and the cattle...

Prosper

צָלַח

Strong's # 6743 tsalahh

*“And he shall be like a tree planted by the streams of water,
That bringeth forth its fruit in its season, Whose leaf also doth not wither; And whatsoever he doeth shall prosper.” (Psalm 1:3)*

This verb means “to succeed by advancing forward in position, possessions or action.” This word is often used in the context of a successful mission such as we see with Abraham’s servant going to his master’s homeland for a wife for his son (Genesis 24:40).

Proverb

מָשַׁל

Strong's # 4912

mashal

“And he took up his parable, and said, From Aram hath Balak brought me, The king of Moab from the mountains of the East: Come, curse me Jacob, And come, defy Israel.” (Numbers 23:7)

A ruler is someone or something that defines a standard of measure. This can be a stick with incremental lines on it for measuring or a person who defines the standard by which people live. The Hebrew verb meaning “to rule” is mashal and, when used in the participle form, it means “a ruler,” or “one who rules.” (Possibly the origin of our word marshal?) The noun form, also pronounced mashal, is a parable or proverb. The function of a parable or proverb is to define a standard of measure that one is to live by. For example, In all thy ways acknowledge him, And he will direct thy paths (Proverbs 3:6).

Psalm

מִזְמוֹר

Strong's # 4210

mizmor

{To the chief Musician, A Psalm of David.} Deliver me, O LORD, from the evil man: preserve me from the violent man; (Psalm 140:1, KJV)

The verbal root zamar (Strong's #2167) means “to make music by ‘plucking’ a musical instrument.” Music or melody is the Hebrew noun mizmor and is the word for a Psalm, a song accompanied by a stringed musical instrument. The verbal root zamar also means to “pluck” fruit.

Ram

אֵיִל

Strong's #
352*ayil*

“And Abraham lifted up his eyes, and looked, and behold, behind him a ram caught in the thicket by his horns. And Abraham went and took the ram, and offered him up for a burnt-offering in the stead of his son.” (Genesis 22:13)

This Hebrew word is usually translated as “a ram,” but also as “an oak tree.” Because our modern western minds associate an object with an image, we cannot comprehend how the Ancient Hebrew/Eastern mind saw these two objects as being similar. The Ancient Hebrews associated an object with its function rather than its appearance. The functional meaning of ayil is “a strong one;” the ram is the strong one of the herd and the oak, the hardest of woods, is the strong one of the forest.

Reed

סופ

Strong's # 5488 suph

“And when she could not longer hide him, she took for him an ark of bulrushes, and daubed it with slime and with pitch; and she put the child therein, and laid it in the flags by the river’s brink.” (Exodus 2:3)

Reeds commonly grow on the banks of rivers. This word is used in Exodus 2:3 for the reeds that were on the edge of the Nile. This word is also the name of the sea that Moses parted, the Yam Suph, which translates to the “Reed Sea” but mistakenly is called the “Red Sea.” Reeds were used for making twine, rope, baskets and paper.

Rejoice

גִּיל

Strong's #
1523giyl

That I may show forth all thy praise. In the gates of the daughter of Zion I will rejoice in thy salvation. (Psalm 9:14)

A very common song from the book of Psalms is This is the day which the LORD has made; let us rejoice and be glad in it (118:24). “Rejoice” is an abstract word, a Greek form of thought. The Hebrew word giyl, translated as “rejoice” in the above verse, is related to other Hebrew words like galgal (Strong's #1534) meaning “a wheel,” galal (Strong's #1556) meaning “to roll” and galiyl (Strong's #1550) meaning “a turning.” Each of these words is related to “going around in a circle.” From a Hebraic concrete perspective “rejoicing,” giyl, means “to spin around in circles.”

Religion

אֶרַח

Strong's # 734 orahh

Now Abraham and Sarah were old, and well stricken in age; it had ceased to be with Sarah after the manner of women. (Genesis 18:11)

One word that is probably most associated with the Bible is “religion.” In reality there is no Biblical Hebrew word for religion and you will never find the word religion in any translation of the Hebrew Bible (Tenakh/Old Testament). To the Ancient Hebrews, their religion was their lifestyle and covered all aspects of life from worship to using the latrine (see Deuteronomy 23:13,14). The Hebrew word orahh can mean a path used by travelers, as well as the path of life, a lifestyle.

Repeat

עִיד

Strong's #
5749*ud*

“But if the ox was wont to gore in time past, and it hath been testified to its owner, and he hath not kept it in, but it hath killed a man or a woman, the ox shall be stoned, and its owner also shall be put to death.” (Exodus 21:29)

This verb means “to witness” in the sense of a person “repeating” what he heard or saw. The noun derived from this verb is eyd (Strong’s #5707] which is a “witness.” Another word coming from this verb is the adverb od (Strong’s #5751] meaning “again.”

Resting

מְנוּחָה

Strong's# 4496

for ye are not as yet come to the rest and to the inheritance, which YHWH thy God giveth thee. (Deuteronomy 12:9)

The Hebrew verb nu'ahh (Strong's #4496) means “to rest.” The noun form of this word is no'ahh meaning a “resting” and is also the Hebrew form of the name Noah. By adding the “ah” suffix (the feminine ending) and the “m” prefix, a common addition to a root to form another noun, the word menuhhah is formed and means a “resting place” or “place of rest.”

Righteous

צַדִּיק

Strong's #
6662*tsadiyq*

Therefore the wicked shall not stand in the judgment, Nor sinners in the congregation of the righteous. (Psalm 1:5)

The Hebrew language is a very concrete language, meaning that each word is a description of an action of a person or object. This is unlike our modern languages that are abstract words. The word “righteous” is an example of an abstract: that has no connection to something physical. The Hebrew word tsadiyq does not mean “righteous” in an abstract way, but in the action of staying on course or following the path.

River

נָהָר

Strong's # 5104 nahar

And a river went out of Eden to water the garden; and from thence it was parted, and became four heads. (Genesis 2:10)

A river was considered a giver of life to the inhabitants of the Ancient Near East. Not only did it provide water to the desert, but its annual flooding deposited water in the surrounding land for the production of crops. For this reason, the Hebrew word nahar can be translated as “a river” or “a flood.”

Rock

צוֹר

Strong's #
6697*tsur*

“Behold, I will stand before thee there upon the rock in Horeb; and thou shalt smite the rock, and there shall come water out of it, that the people may drink. And Moses did so in the sight of the elders of Israel.” (Exodus 17:6)

The Hebrew word tsur word is used 78 times in the Biblical text and is usually translated as “rock,” but means something more than just a rock. This is a large rock outcropping that can be used as a defensive position, a stronghold or fortress. With God is my salvation and my glory: The rock (tsur) of my strength, and my refuge, is in God. (Psalm 62:7). A related word, matsur, is usually translated as “a fortress.”

Sabbath

שַׁבָּת

Strong's #
7676 shabbat

Remember the sabbath day, to keep it holy. (Exodus 20:8)

The verb form of this word is shavat ^(Strong's #7673) and literally means “to cease” or “stop.” It is first used in Genesis 2:2 where God “ceased” from his work. As ceasing from work is associated with resting, some translate shavat as “rest.” The noun form is the word shabbat and means “a ceasing” or “stopping” and is usually translated as Sabbath, the day God set aside for “resting” from our work (Exodus 20:10).

Sack

שק

Strong's # 8242

saq

“Then Joseph commanded to fill their vessels with grain, and to restore every man’s money into his sack, and to give them provisions for the way: and thus was it done unto them.” (Genesis 42:25)

Isn’t it interesting that the Hebrew word saq means sack? Because so many Hebrew words are similar to English, or should I say so many English words “come from” Hebrew, it helps to associate Hebrew words with English when learning the vocabulary.

Scroll

סֵפֶר

Strong's # 5612 sepher

This is the book of the generations of Adam. In the day that God created man, in the likeness of God made he him; (Genesis 5:1)

Books are a fairly recent invention. In ancient times texts were written down on square sheets of skin or papyrus (made from reeds and the origin of our word paper). Multiple sheets would then be sewn together creating one long sheet called a scroll. This long sheet was then rolled up and placed in a leather sleeve or clay jar for storage. In caves near the Dead Sea in Israel hundreds of these scrolls were discovered, which included texts of the Tenakh (Old Testament) as well as non-Biblical texts.

Season

עֵת

Strong's # 6256

eyt

then I will give your rains in their season, and the land shall yield its increase, and the trees of the field shall yield their fruit. (Leviticus 26:4)

This word more specifically means “an appointed time” such as a season, a scheduled event, or simply a specific point in time.

Send

שְׁלַח

Strong's # 7971 shelahh

Come now therefore, and I will send thee unto Pharaoh, that thou mayest bring forth my people the children of Israel out of Egypt. (Exodus 3:10)

The Hebrew verb shelahh is used over 861 times in the Hebrew Bible and means “to send” in a wide variety of applications such as “to shoot,” “cast out,” “stretch out,” “send away,” “throw,” “go” and others. Several nouns are derived from this verbal root including shelahh (Strong's #7973) meaning a projectile, through the idea of “sending,” shilu'ahh (Strong's #7964) meaning a present which is sent to another and shul'hhan (Strong's #7979), meaning a table where food is sent.

Settle

יָשַׁב

Strong's # 3427 yashav

And Adah bare Jabal: he was the father of such as dwell in tents and have cattle. (Genesis 4:20)

Yashav can mean to settle down in a dwelling for the night or for long periods of time. This verb can also mean to simply sit down.

Shadow of death

צִלְמוֹת

Strong's# 6757 tsalmavet

Let darkness and the shadow of death claim it for their own; Let a cloud dwell upon it; Let all that maketh black the day terrify it. (Job 3:5)

The Hebrew language rarely includes compound words (two words put together to form one word). One of those few compound words in Hebrew is tsalmavet, a combination of the word tsal (Strong's #6738) meaning "shadow" and mavet (Strong's #4194) meaning "death." The "shadow of death" is despair, danger or tragedy that is understood as a deep impenetrable darkness.

Sheqel

שֶׁקֶל

Strong's # 8255

sheqel

My lord, hearken unto me. A piece of land worth four hundred shekels of silver, what is that betwixt me and thee? Bury therefore thy dead. (Genesis 23:15)

The currency in modern Israel is called a sheqel (or shekel). However, in Biblical Hebrew the word sheqel was a unit of measurement, a weight of a material such as grain or silver.

Shophar

שׁוֹפָר

Strong's # 7782

shophar

“Then shalt thou send abroad the loud trumpet on the tenth day of the seventh month; in the day of atonement shall ye send abroad the trumpet throughout all your land.” (Leviticus 25:9)

Made from a ram’s horn, the shofar was used to call an assembly together or an army to battle. The shofar was used in ancient times, as well as in modern times, during the feasts of YHWH and on the Shabbat. In Exodus 19:16, 19:19 and 20:18 the people heard a very loud shofar blast coming from the mountain of God, giving them great fear. This was also the instrument that was sounded when the walls of Jericho fell (Joshua 6:4).

Sinner

חָטָא

Strong's # 2400

hhata

Blessed is the man that walketh not in the counsel of the wicked, Nor standeth in the way of sinners, Nor sitteth in the seat of scoffers: (Psalm 1:1)

When one shoots at a target and misses it, we would say that he “missed the mark,” just as we see in Judges 20:16: ...every one could sling stones at a hair-breadth, and not miss. The verb translated as “miss” in this verse is hhata (Strong's #2398). This verb is also frequently translated as “sin.” God provides man with the target, his teachings, and when man does not hit that target, he “misses the mark.” The word hhata, the noun form of the verb, means a “sinner,” or “one who misses the mark.”

Sky

שָׁמַיִם

Strong's# 8064 shamayim

In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth. (Genesis 1:1)

There is some debate over the etymology (origins and roots) of this word. The “sh” may be a prefix meaning “like” followed by the word mayim (Strong's #4325) meaning “water:” like water. It may be the plural form of a noun derived from the verbal root shamam (Strong's #8074) meaning “desolate” in the sense of a dry wind blowing over the land, drying it out. It may also be the plural form of the word shem (Strong's #8034) meaning “name,” but more literally “breath” (in Hebrew thought the name of a person is his breath, since the breath is seen as the character of the individual).

Sling

קֶלַע

Strong's #
7050*qela*

“So David prevailed over the Philistine with a sling and with a stone, and smote the Philistine, and slew him; but there was no sword in the hand of David.” (1 Samuel 17:50)

The sling was a common weapon carried by shepherds to defend the flock; however, modern versions of a sling are very different from those original weapons. The stones were generally 2 to 3 inches in diameter and carefully chipped into a perfect sphere. It was not slung in circles above the head, but slung in one arc in the same manner as a softball is pitched and could be thrown with very surprising force, accuracy and distance. It is a deadly weapon and was used by most all ancient armies of the Ancient Near East.

Son

בן

Strong's #

1121 ben

“Thou shalt betroth a wife, and another man shall lie with her: thou shalt build a house, and thou shalt not dwell therein: thou shalt plant a vineyard, and shalt not use the fruit thereof.”
(Deuteronomy 28:30)

In the original pictographic script, the first letter for this was a picture of a tent or house. The second letter was the picture of a seed. The seed is a new generation of life that will grow and produce a new generation; therefore, this letter can mean “to continue.” When combined, these two letters form the word meaning “to continue the house.” This word is related to the verb banah ^(Strong's #), which means to “build,” as one “builds a house” with children. Another related Hebrew word is even ^(Strong's #68), which is “stone,” and stones are also used to “build a house.”

Stand

עמד

Strong's #
5975 amad

And the people stood afar off, and Moses drew near unto the thick darkness where God was. (Exodus 20:21)

This verb means “to stand” but can be used in a wide variety of applications, such as to be erect or upright, to remain or maintain in the sense of standing in one place or to establish or appoint in the sense of being stood in a position. The noun form, amud ^(Strong's #5982), is a pillar which stands firm and tall. Both the verb and noun form can be found in Exodus 14:19: and the pillar (amud) of the cloud went from before their face, and stood (amad) behind them.

Star

כֹּכַב

Strong's # 3556

kokav

“And he brought him forth abroad, and said, Look now toward heaven, and number the stars, if thou be able to number them: and he said unto him, So shall thy seed be.” (Genesis 15:5)

Of course we know that stars are extremely large balls of gas trillions and trillions of miles out in space, but how did the Ancient Hebrew perceive the stars? Reading the Bible must be from the Hebrew perspective, not ours. The Hebrews, being nomads, lived in black goat hair tents. The hair fabric had pinholes of light and when looking up at the tent roof, it looked just like the night sky. This is alluded to in Isaiah 40:22: [God] stretcheth out the heavens as a curtain, and spreadeth them out as a tent to dwell in.

Stone

אֶבֶן

Strong's #
68 ehven

And if thou make me an altar of stone, thou shalt not build it of hewn stones; for if thou lift up thy tool upon it, thou hast polluted it. (Exodus 20:25)

In the land of Israel stones were a common building material. The Hebrew word even (stone) is related to several other words, all related to “building.” Banah (Strong's #1129) is a verb meaning to build. Bohen (Strong's #931) is “the thumb,” considered to be the builder, as the thumb is necessary for doing any work. Ben (Strong's #1121) is the Hebrew word “son,” the building stones of the family.

Stork

חַסִּידָה

Strong's#
2624 hhasiydah

*Where the birds make their nests:
As for the stork, the fir-trees are her house. (Psalm 104:17)*

A “stork” shows great kindness to its offspring and it was believed that the offspring showed kindness to the parents by caring for them in their old age. The masculine form of this word, hhasiyd ^(Strong's #2623), often translated as “saint,” is one who shows kindness to another. These two words are derived from the verbal root hhasad ^(Strong's #2616) meaning “to show kindness.”

Stretch out

רָבַץ

Strong's #
7257*ravats*

“Judah is a lion’s whelp; From the prey, my son, thou art gone up: He stooped down, he couched as a lion, And as a lioness; who shall rouse him up?” (Genesis 49:9)

This verb means to lie down in a resting position to rest, but can also mean to crouch down in hiding for an ambush.

Stumbling-Block

מִכְשׁוֹל

Strong's#
4383 mikh'shol

Thou shalt not curse the deaf, nor put a stumblingblock before the blind; but thou shalt fear thy God: I am YHWH. (Leviticus 19:14)

The Hebrew verb kashal (Strong's #3782) means “to topple over.” This can occur when a person stumbles over the stones of a building that had toppled over. The noun mikh'shol (Strong's #4383) is “a ruin,” the stone blocks of a wall or building that has toppled down. These blocks are now removed from their original and functional position and are “out of place,” which can be a “stumbling-block” to others. You shall not curse the deaf or put a stumbling-block [mikh'shol] before the blind (Leviticus 19:14). This “stumbling-block” is a toppled-over block that has been placed before a person to cause them to topple over as well.

Summit

רֶשִׁיט

Strong's # 7225

reshiyt

“All the best of the oil, and all the best of the vintage, and of the grain, the first-fruits of them which they give unto YHWH, to thee have I given them.”
(Numbers 18:12)

The Hebrew root word rosh (Strong's #7218) is “the head of a man.” Derived from this root is the word reshiyt meaning “a summit,” the head of a mountain. Hebrew words for “time” are the same words used for “space.” For instance, the word qedem (Strong's #6924) means “east,” but can also mean “ancient.” The word reshiyt can also be the head of an event, the beginning. While we are very familiar with Genesis 1:1, In the beginning, this should literally be translated as In the summit and more probably refers to the importance of the creation story rather than its time frame, for the Ancient Hebrews were not as concerned with time as they were event-oriented.

Swarm

עָרֹב

Strong's # 6157

arov

“Else, if thou wilt not let my people go, behold, I will send swarms of flies upon thee, and upon thy servants, and upon thy people, and into thy houses: and the houses of the Egyptians shall be full of swarms of flies, and also the ground whereon they are.” (Exodus 8:21)

Have you ever had a fly or other winged bug annoyingly and constantly zip around your head? Imagine millions of them and you have a pretty good idea of what the plague of “flies” was like in Egypt (Exodus 8:24). This word is related to other Hebrew words that mean a “mixture” and “darkness.”

Teachings

תּוֹרָה

Strong's #
8451 torah

Because that Abraham obeyed my voice, and kept my charge, my commandments, my statutes, and my laws. (Genesis 26:5)

One of the most misunderstood words in the Hebrew Bible is the Hebrew word torah. This word is usually translated as “law,” which by definition is a set of rules and regulations established by a government and are enforced with the threat of fines or imprisonment. However, the word torah literally means “teachings,” a set of instructions given by a teacher or parent in order to foster maturity, and is enforced with discipline and encouragement.

Tent

אֹהֶל

Strong's #
168 ohel

And he went on his journeys from the South even to Beth-el, unto the place where his tent had been at the beginning, between Beth-el and Ai, (Genesis 13:3)

Every nomadic culture around the globe constructs tents based on two basic requirements; environment and available material. The Plains Indians of North America lived in cold environments with deer skins available in large quantity. Their shelter of choice was the tee-pee. The Hebrews constructed tents out of spun goat's hair from their herds. Because of the wind and blowing sand, they constructed low profile tents. The sides could be rolled up to allow for air circulation in the heat of the day, and the black hair absorbed the heat of the day to keep it warmer during the night.

Thanksgiving

תּוֹדָה

Strong's #
8426*todah*

Offer unto God the sacrifice of thanksgiving; And pay thy vows unto the Most High: (Psalm 50:14)

The word todah comes from the verbal root yadah (Strong's #3034) meaning "to throw out the hands." This root is in turn derived from the parent root yad (Strong's #3027) meaning "hand." This word is synonymous with the verbal root halal (Strong's #1984), usually translated as "praise," as can be seen in the following verse where these two words are used in parallel: I will praise the name of God with a song, And will magnify him with thanksgiving (Psalm 69:30). In Modern Hebrew this word is used for "thank you."

Thumb

בְּתוֹ

Strong's # 931

bohen

“And he slew it; and Moses took of the blood thereof, and put it upon the tip of Aaron’s right ear, and upon the thumb of his right hand, and upon the great toe of his right foot.” (Leviticus 8:23)

The thumb was identified as the “builder,” because of its need for “work” or “building.” This Hebrew word is not only related to the idea of building, but the word bohen itself is related to the Hebrew word meaning “to build,” banah (Strong's #1129).

Title

שֵׁם

Strong's # 8034 shem

“and he called his name Noah, saying, This same shall comfort us in our work and in the toil of our hands, which cometh because of the ground which YHWH hath cursed.” (Genesis 5:29)

In our modern western culture, a “name” is a series of letters put together to form an abstract identifier of a person. However, in Hebrew, a “name” is more of what we would call a “title,” a word with meaning. An example is the “name” Adam ^(Strong's #120) which is related to the Hebrew word adamah ^(Strong's #127) meaning “ground.” This link between Adam and ground can be seen in Genesis 2:7 - And YHWH formed the Adam of dust from the ground.

Transplant

שָׁתַל

Strong's # 8362

shatal

“And he shall be like a tree planted by the streams of water, That bringeth forth its fruit in its season, Whose leaf also doth not wither; And whatsoever he doeth shall prosper.” (Psalm 1:3)

This verb is almost always translated as “plant,” however, this word has the more specific meaning of “transplanting,” to remove something from an undesirable location and place it in a desirable location. This can be a plant such as a vine, which is transplanted in better soil or a person who is placed in a better environment.

Tree

עץ

Strong's # 6086

eyts

“And out of the ground made YHWH God to grow every tree that is pleasant to the sight, and good for food; the tree of life also in the midst of the garden, and the tree of the knowledge of good and evil.” (Genesis 2:9)

When we think of a tree, an image comes to mind; but when the Hebrews, who wrote the Bible, thought of a tree, an action came to mind. This is one of the foundational differences between Ancient Hebrew and Modern Western thought. The Hebrew word eyts represents a tree, but embodies more the action of lifting up with support that is the function of the trunk and branches of the tree. Other related words also have this same “active” meaning. The word atseh ^(Strong's #6096) is “the spine,” eytsah ^(Strong's #6098) is a “council” and etsem ^(Strong's #6106) is the word for “bones.”

Trench

מַעַגָּל

Strong's # 4570

magal

“And David rose up early in the morning, and left the sheep with a keeper, and took, and went, as Jesse had commanded him; and he came to the trench, as the host was going forth to the fight, and shouted for the battle.” (1 Samuel 17:20, KJV)

When wagons are repeatedly driven down a path, the wheels cut grooves, ruts or trenches in the path. These grooves force wagons to follow this very same path time after time. For this reason, this word means a path that is well defined and easy to follow.

Tributary

פֶּלֶג

Strong's #
6388*peleg*

“And he shall be like a tree planted by the streams of water, That bringeth forth its fruit in its season, Whose leaf also doth not wither; And whatsoever he doeth shall prosper.” (Psalm 1:3)

Peleg comes from the verbal root palag (Strong's #6385) meaning “to split.” A tributary is a stream that is “split” off from the main river.

Truth

אֱמֶת

Strong's # 571 emet

Thy righteousness is an everlasting righteousness, And thy law is truth. (Psalm 119:142)

The root of this word is aman ^(Strong's #539), a word often translated as “believe,” but more literally meaning “support,” as we see in Isaiah 22:23 where it says “I will drive him like a peg in a place of support...” A belief in Elohiym is not a mental exercise of knowing that Elohiym exists, but rather our responsibility to show him our support. The word emet has the similar meaning of firmness, something that is firmly set in place.

Turn back

שׁוּב

Strong's #
7725*shuv*

“in the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread, till thou return unto the ground; for out of it wast thou taken: for dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return.” (Genesis 3:19)

This word means “to return to a previous state or place.” The first use of this word is found in Genesis 3:19 where man (adam), who is taken from the ground (adamah) will return (shuv) to the ground (adamah). This verb is frequently used for repentance, where one is going in the wrong direction but then turns around and heads back in the correct direction.

Valley

גַּי

Strong's # 1516 gai

*So we abode in the valley over against Beth-peor.
(Deuteronomy 3:2)*

The parent root of this word is gey (Strong's #1341), a word meaning “pride” in the sense of lifting oneself up to a high position. The word gai is “a valley,” a place surrounded by “high” walls. While a valley can be a place of beauty, it can also be a place of darkness and defenselessness.

Vineyard

כֶּרֶם

Strong's # 3754 kerem

And Noah began to be a husbandman, and planted a vineyard: (Genesis 9:20)

This word is first mentioned in Genesis 9:20 when Noah planted a vineyard for making wine. One of the oldest and most common fruits grown in the Ancient Near East, the grape was predominately used for making wine. The grapes were also dried and pounded into cakes.

Walk

הלך

Strong's # 1980 halak

Arise, walk through the land in the length of it and in the breadth of it; for unto thee will I give it. (Genesis 13:17)

This word is found over 1300 times in the Bible and can be used in the sense of “going,” “coming,” “carrying,” “bringing,” “leaving,” “following” and even “walking.” The original pictographs used to write this word are a picture of the palm of the hand and a staff. What is one going to do when they put a staff in the palm of the hand? Take a walk.

Wall

חַיִל

Strong's # 2426 hheyl

Peace be within thy walls, And prosperity within thy palaces.
(Psalm 122:7)

Many of the cities mentioned in the Bible were surrounded by a large wall to keep an enemy from entering the city. Because an army performs this same protective function, they are also called a “wall,” or in Hebrew a *hhey*l. Hhayil (a closely related word) is the Modern Hebrew word for the “army” of Israel.

Water

מים

Strong's # 4325 mayim

And the earth was waste and void; and darkness was upon the face of the deep: and the Spirit of God moved upon the face of the waters. (Genesis 1:2)

This word is first used in the above verse. This Hebrew word is used for any water, whether it is a jar of water or the water of the oceans. A very interesting Hebrew idiom is “water at the feet” meaning “urine” (2 Kings 18:27).

Weave

שָׁבַץ

Strong's # 7660

shavats

“And thou shalt weave the coat in checker work of fine linen, and thou shalt make a mitre of fine linen, and thou shalt make a girdle, the work of the embroiderer.” (Exodus 28:39)

Weaving means to take several different strands of material and intertwine them together to create an object, such as a basket. A related verb is hhashav (Strong's #2803) meaning “to think” or “calculate,” which is to take several different ideas and intertwine them to create one primary idea.

Well

בַּיֵּר

Strong's #
875*be'er*

Wherefore the well was called Beer-lahai-roi; behold, it is between Kadesh and Bered. (Genesis 16:14)

Ancient wells were holes dug down in the ground to the water table. The well was usually covered over with a large rock to keep debris out and prevent people from falling in. The stone was removed and a bucket tied to a rope was lowered to retrieve the water. As nomads, the Ancient Hebrews knew the locations of many wells in the area of their journeys. City wells were usually inside the city walls, so that its inhabitants had access to water during sieges. Some wells were so large a winding staircase was cut in the sides of the well for people to descend down into the well. In the case of the Siloam well, located outside the city, a tunnel from inside the city to the well was cut through solid rock.

Which

אֲשֶׁר

Strong's # 834 asher

“And God made the firmament, and divided the waters which were under the firmament from the waters which were above the firmament: and it was so.”
(Genesis 1:7)

The Hebrew word asher can be translated as the relative participle “which” or “who(m).” It is derived from the parent root shar, meaning a “cord.” A cord is used for attaching one thing to another. The word asher is related to this idea of attaching one part of a sentence to another, such as we see in Genesis 2:8 - “the Adam whom he formed.”

Wicked

רָשָׁע

Strong's # 7563 rasha

Blessed is the man that walketh not in the counsel of the wicked, Nor standeth in the way of sinners, Nor sitteth in the seat of scoffers: (Psalm 1:1)

In the English language a wicked person is one who performs evil. However, in the Hebrew language the noun rasha has a very different meaning. By investigating the verbal root of this word, we can gain a clearer picture of its meaning. The root of this word is the verb rasha ^(Strong's #7561) and its original concrete meaning can be found in Psalm 18:21: For I have guarded the paths of YHWH, and have not departed from my Elohiym. (Most translations have “wickedly departed,” but the word “wickedly” is added to the text and is not part of the Hebrew). The verb rasha means “to depart from the path,” either by walking off the path on purpose or by becoming lost from the path. The noun rasha is “one who has walked off the path.”

Wilderness

מִדְבָּר

Strong's # 4057 mid'bar

And YHWH said to Aaron, Go into the wilderness to meet Moses. And he went, and met him in the mountain of God, and kissed him. (Exodus 4:27)

For forty years Elohiym had Israel wander in the “wilderness.” Insights into why Elohiym had chosen the wilderness for their wanderings can be found in the roots of this word. The root word is davar ^(Strong's #1696) and is most frequently translated as “speak,” but more literally means to “order” or “arrange” words. The word midbar is a place existing in a perfectly arranged order, an ecosystem in harmony and balance. By placing Israel in this environment, he was teaching them balance, order and harmony.

Wind

רוּחַ

Strong's #
7307*ru'ahh*

And the earth was waste and void; and darkness was upon the face of the deep: and the Spirit of God moved upon the face of the waters. (Genesis 1:2)

In Hebrew thought the wind can be many things. It is the wind that blows in the sky, it can be the breath of man or animals and it is also the breath of God. In Hebrew thought your breath is your character or essence; it is what makes you, you. The breath, or wind of God, is his character or essence. In the same way that our breath is like a wind, God is like a wind. God is not an individual person that exists as we do; he is everywhere just like the wind is everywhere. Many times the Hebrew word ru'ahh is translated as “spirit,” but this abstract term takes us away from the real concrete meaning of the Hebrew word. Rather than looking at God as a spirit, we can read the text more Hebraicly if we replace the word “spirit” with “wind.”

Wine

יָיִן

Strong's #
3196*yayin*

“and thou shalt bestow the money for whatsoever thy soul desireth, for oxen, or for sheep, or for wine, or for strong drink, or for whatsoever thy soul asketh of thee; and thou shalt eat there before YHWH thy God, and thou shalt rejoice, thou and thy household.” (Deuteronomy 14:26)

The Hebrew word yayin means “wine” and may possibly be the origin of the word “wine.” The phrase “fruit of the vine” (see Matthew 26:29) is an idiom meaning “wine.” The Jewish blessing for the wine is “barukh atah adonai eloheynu melekh ha’olam borey periy hagafen” meaning “blessed are you O Lord our God, creator of the fruit of the vine.”

Woman

אִשָּׁה

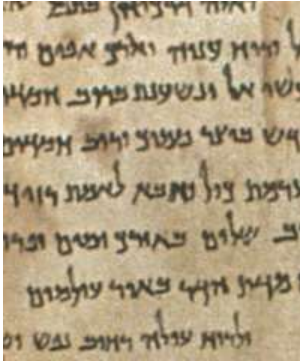

Strong's #
802 ishah

And the man said, This is now bone of my bones, and flesh of my flesh: she shall be called Woman, because she was taken out of Man. (Genesis 2:23)

The Hebrew word for woman is ishah, derived from the masculine noun ish (Strong's #376) by adding the “ah” suffix, which is often used for feminine nouns. It is interesting to note that just as the word “man” is found in the English word “woman,” it is also so in the Hebrew language.

Write

כָּתַב

Strong's # 3789

katav

“And Moses wrote all the words of YHWH, and rose up early in the morning, and builded an altar under the mount, and twelve pillars, according to the twelve tribes of Israel.” (Exodus 24:4)

Several methods of writing were used in ancient times. Wet clay was written on with a stylus, a pointed stick. Papyrus and leather were written on with reed pens using ink. Rocks were written on with chisels. Wood was written on with sharp objects.
